"If you can toss a match into a clearing,
And never give a thought to put it out,
Or drop your clearette butt without fearing
That flames may kindle in the leaves about;
If you can knock the ashes from your brier,
Without a glance to see where they may fall,
And later flud the forest all aftre
Where you have passed—with no one near to call;
If you can drive your auto through the working
And cast your stogle stub into the slash,
Unmindful of the danger therein lurking,
Or homes or happiness that you may smash;
If you can leave your campfire while 'tis glowing,

If you can leave your camplire while 'tis gi fing,
No thought of industries that it may blight,
Or of the billion saplings in the growing
Turned into charcoal ere the coming night;
If you can start a fire beneath a brush pile
When the wind is roaring like a distant gunYou surely should be jailed without a trial
And boldly labelled 'lunatie,' my son."

3 Day

of Month and Pre-Holiday Sale Now in Progress

And continues through until Tuesday night, July 3

We have arranged to hold this very important sale of the store's finest and most pleasing of merchandise in which several departments will take part.

We may say this will be an innovation sale since our store has not in any former year offered such remarkable values thus early in the season.

10 to 50 per cent. below prevailing prices

From every standpoint from which it can be considered it will prove one of this store's most important sales. It has been made possible by reason of our very large stocks most advantageously purchased and our desire to promote and increase the value of our store service.

This sale gives you a splendid opportunity to secure your nonday apparel at saving prices. We wish to emphasize the fact that all Ready-to-wear apparel throughout the store is at 10 per cent. or more discount during these sale days.

HOMEMAKERS' COLUMN.

The people who have been free from illness this winter are emerging into an active spring, free also from "that tired feeling." They are the people who have mixed a few of the newly discovered facts, given us by distitians, with their foods. Perhaps the facts themselves are not so new, but given with reason, in-who mixed plenty of vegetables with their winter diet, and who added to the menu some raw vegetable or fruit. Apples, oranges, lettuce, turnip can be obtained all winter. Yes, even raw turnip in tiny squares adds to a salad! Begin now to plan safety for anothe year. Unless we begin in spring or early summer, we shall not have an conomical supply of exactly what we need. Begin with asparagus; put a part of it into cans, for home-canned vegetables, if properly done, seem to give more satisfaction than the delightfully crisp product obtained from the can-one from your own canned string beans. Children's school gardens have taught us how to get really excellent results from a small plot of ground. String Evening, 15c and 25c. beans, to can successfully, must be recently picked. Raise a few for your cans, even if you must buy them for your table. Have a little flourishing corner of winter spinach. Spinach bes reserves its qualities in the leaf. It tained fresh all winter.

Two people who eat enough green nings with their winter diet can dispose four dozen small jars of string beans, ars of small beets, which are good for ither vegetable or salad. Add to this supply as many jars-of peaches, pears, apple sauce, and berries as can be obained. The half-pint jar is economica or this purpose, as it is easily used up was considered inevitable. Now we know that it is largely a result of months without sufficient exercise, and meals of heavy, unlightened food. The salad and fruits in winter cost money; too ong we have considered these things luxuries. But the meat bill lessens portion as the vegetable and fruit l increases. Men do not take kindly salad. A census of the men who voluntarily eat celery, lettuce, red cab bage, or even radishes, would be disappointing. One difficulty is in our appointing. One difficulty is in our method of preparing these simple articles of food. We do prepare them; what the men ey balk at a dressed salad, when they il automatically eat, with salt, the leaf lettuce or raw cabbage tactfully left their elbows. What a saving of work or the housewife! A little urging may be necessary; it may be that there must of a little insistence on modern methods of getting vigor from vitamins. It will require much less effort on the part of those who have the old-fashioned man to feed, if the insistence does not, also, include the swallowing, perforce, of strange and unwelcome dressings.

Central Maine Power Company In Strong Financial Position

HEN a bank or a bond salesman or a stockholder or a section purchase Central Maine Power Company Seven Per Cent. Preferred Stock as an investment they know that the earning statements back them up in their statement that it is an exceptionally safe investment and that the company is in an exceptionally strong financial position.

Take, for example, Central Maine Power Company's system earnings for the year ending April 30-which are the latest figures available.

The company took in during the 12 months, from the sale of electric energy, gas and street car service, over three and one-half million

It used over a half million dollars for replacing property that was worn out or to put aside as a reserve for this purpose.

Its other operating expenses amounted to slightly under a million and a half dollars. ("Operating expenses" include the money paid in wages and taxes and for similar purposes and cover all costs for making the electric energy, selling it and collecting the bills.)

The company paid for the use of money lent the company through the sale of bonds, etc.; and as guaranteed dividends on the stock of subsidiary companies slightly less than one million dollars. It paid to its preferred stockholders as their share of the earnings of the company nearly a half million dollars.

That left a remainder, after all bills were paid, of net profit for the company for the year's operation of $159,289.89.

It is not to be wondered at that a security backed by net earnings of $159,289.89, a security with a dividend record unbroken for almost eighteen years is regarded by the people of Maine as a particularly safe investment.

The owners of this security are to be congratulated on the sound financial position of the Com-

The officers of the organization feel all confidence that its 7 per cent. preferred stock will continue to pay dividends as long as the people of Maine find use for lights and energy and as long as hydro-electricity continues to furnish the best, easiest and cheapest form of lights and energy.
